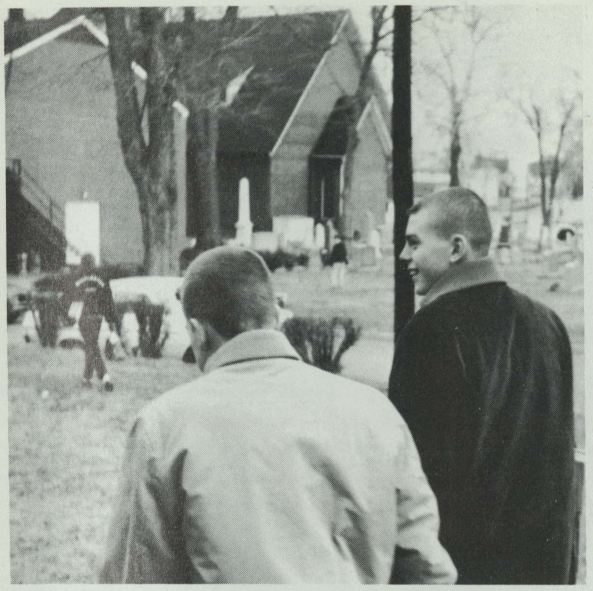
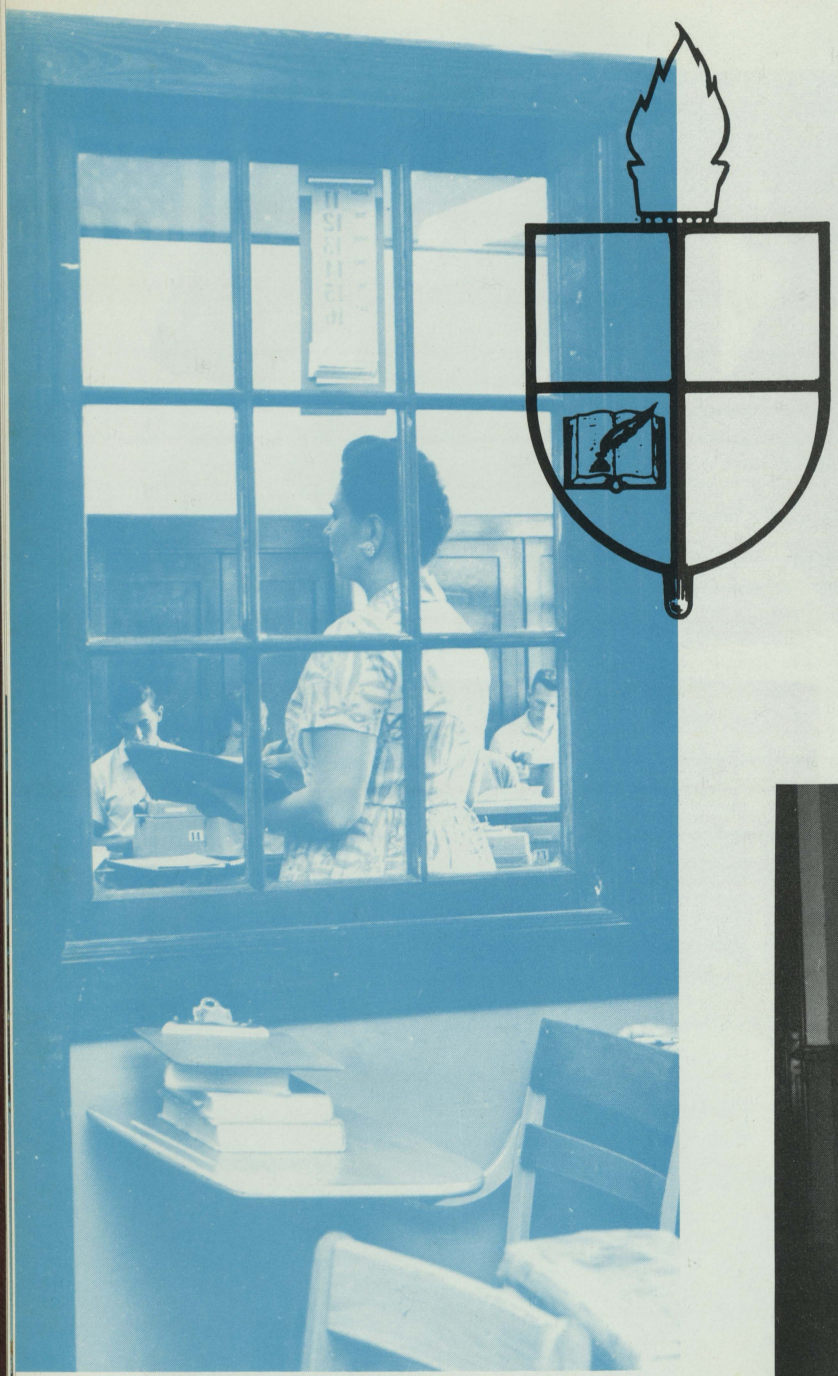
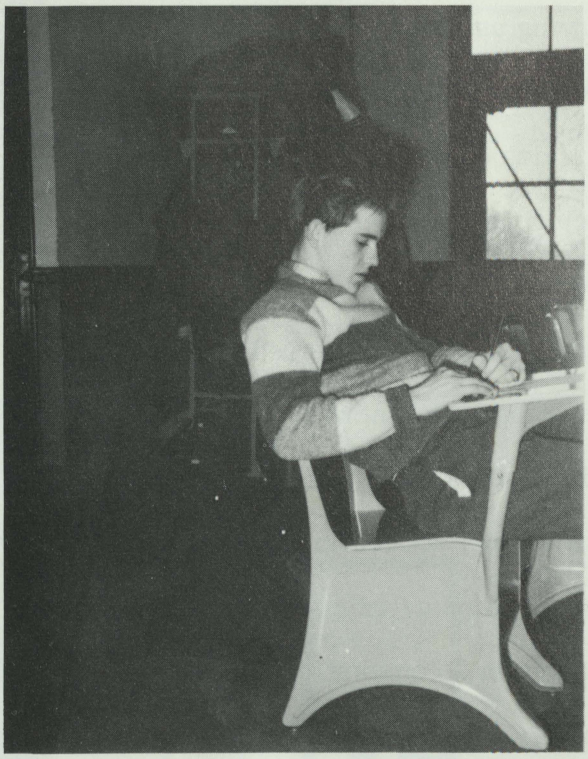
Socially



Serving as a keystone of social development, education at W.H.S. provides opportunities for students to cultivate new interests. Using their individual talents, students learn to fulfill social needs by co-operating with others in a group. This enables them to build a strong, but flexible, foundation for future relationships as responsible citizens in a constantly changing world.



. . . Mentally



New demands of the professions and government have enlarged the school's function to prepare students not only for individual experiences, ranging from daydreaming to serious study, but to provide the foundation for understanding oneself and other citizens. Accepting the challenge of the future, W.H.S. offers courses which prepare youths for college or a vocation. W.H.S. also includes adult education classes at night.

Physically

Enduring strength of a structure depends upon its foundation, and greatness of a school or a state is based upon strong, fit citizens. Correct procedure and healthful training required to achieve physical fitness are part of a mandatory program at W.H.S. Competition necessary for developing strong bodies and minds is stressed in intramural and interscholastic sports.

The Hatchet Staff

The responsibility for producing The Hatchet is the obligation of the yearbook staff. Pictures, artwork and appointments are planned, layouts are determined, copy is written, typed and edited, and deadlines are met. Through individual effort and willingness to learn the staff has maintained a high standard of production.

President -- Bev Jones

Vice President -- John Britton

Secretary -- Susan Taylor

Treasurer -- Dale Dryden

Essential to the promotion of better scholastic relationships between teacher and student is Washington High's Student Council. Thirty-three members meet throughout the year to discuss current problems and ideas to improve school standards. The council conducts dances after home basketball games and also sponsors the annual magazine drive.

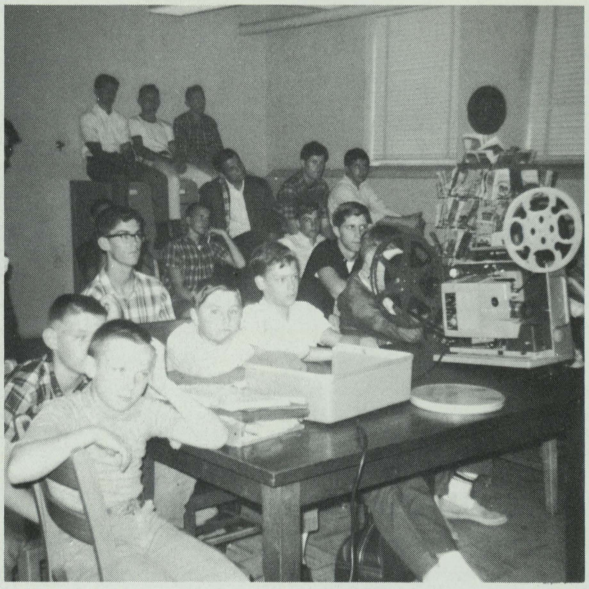
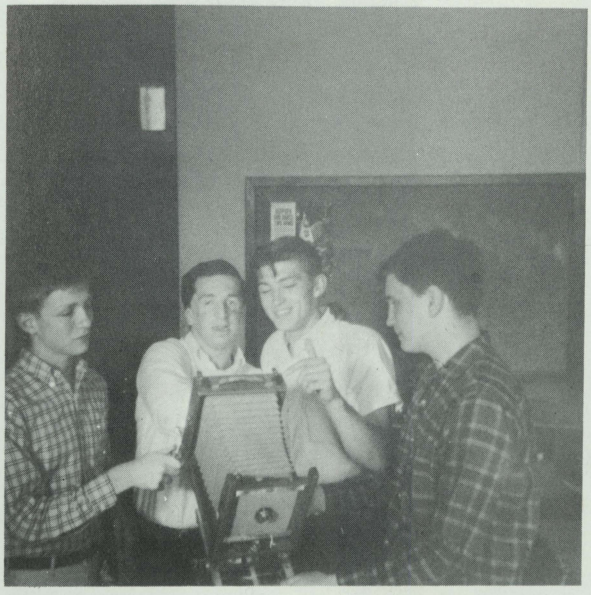
Girl's Athletic Club

Golf Club

The principal objectives of the Rod and Gun Club are to interest the members in good hunting practices, fair sportsmanship, and understanding of game laws and safety while handling fire a arms.



Rod and Gun Club



Camera Club

The Camera Club provides an opportunity for amateur photographers to learn the techniques of good picture taking as well as how to develop their films and print pictures. The club sponsored the Eastman Kodak exhibit of the winning photographs in the 1964 Scholastic Photography Contest.

The Stamp Club, sponsored by Mrs. Evelyn Ruark, provides the members an opportunity to learn geography and to relate this study to the stamp collecting hobby.

The Coin Club, sponsored by Mrs. Jeanette Scott, provides are opportunity for those students interested in coins to exchange coins and information about them. Members are encouraged to collect coins and to learn their value.

Chorus

Music, the universal language, is used by the chorus to convey expressions --

The chorus and affiliated musical groups added zest to assembly programs during the year. The annual spring concert featured selections ranging from classical to modern.

Somerset Chapter National Honor Society

Among the organizations which offer membership to a select group of students is the National Honor Society, advised by Mrs. Helen Johnson. Acceptance into the society is based on scholastic achievement, leadership, character, and service with reference to extra-curricular activities. Junior and seniors must maintain honor roll rating to continue their membership.

Girls' Varsity

The 1965-66 basketball season proved to be very successful for the girls with eight wins and no losses. The squad owed their success to the coaching of Mrs. Barbara Donohoe. The team racked up a total of 413 points over their opponents. A highlight of the season was the defeat of Marion on their homecourt.

Although senior members will be missed next year, Mrs. Donohoe has a fine group of juniors with which to work.

The climax of the undefeated season came on Awards Day, when the Student Council presented the team with an engraved trophy.

Congratulations, girls!

KNEELING: T. Taylor, B. Hill, G. Peacock, R. Powell, R. Scott, R. Brummitt, A. Hudgins, J. Perdue.

To encourage good sportsmanship, boost school spirit, and to lead Wildcat athletes to victory are the duties of the six peppy, energetic Washington High cheerleaders, coached by Mrs. Johanna Dubs.

Pep meetings were organized by the cheerleaders and they coordinated the annual bon fire pep rally. Painting signs and hanging them in the halls maintained school spirit between games.
